

I feel that this is something that will benefit the public greatly. Telemarketers are constantly disrupting people's private lives, and many times do not even have a live person on the phone when you answer. I don't see any reason why these constant annoying calls are necessary. People should be protected from those that are disturbing their private peace. It should be the individual's choice to be placed on a no-call list, and I feel that being placed on that list should be free of charge. This act may also have some economical effects as well. For instance I think this will free up the phone lines in some areas or maybe cause companies to put money into other forms of advertisement. I entirely support the Act.
